

Oregon Public Performance Improvement Association (OPPIA)

HOLD THE DATE! August 11, 2020, Noon-1:30p

FREE live, interactive webinar:

The Promises and Pitfalls of Performance-Informed Management

This is a year like no other. Many of us are working—and learning—remotely. Events we look forward to all year are being canceled or adapted and moved to a new platform.

The unfortunate circumstances of the pandemic have created opportunity and motivation for OPPIA to explore new ways of delivering meaningful content to our members and friends in public service. Instead of our annual summer conference, we'll be moving to smaller, online events throughout the year.

Our first webinar is free and open to anyone.

In August we're bringing you Katherine Barrett and Richard Greene, a pair of nationally recognized author-experts in public performance management. We encourage you to purchase their book The Promises and Pitfalls of Performance-Informed Management online in the delivery format of your choice: hardcover, softcover or Kindle. The authors will pick a topic or two for attendees to read in advance. While you can enjoy the webinar without the book, you will gain more if you do the readings beforehand. Moreover, purchasing the book is a way you can support our speakers, who are generously donating their time to OPPIA.

We're still working out the details so stay tuned. In the meantime, block out your calendar, find a quiet spot to curl up, and read the book.

Katherine Barrett and Richard Greene

Over the course of nearly 30 years, Katherine Barrett and Richard Greene, principals of Barrett and Greene, Inc. have done much-praised analysis, research and writing about state and local governments. They are nationally-known authorities in performance management, budgeting and finance; human resources, procurement; tax systems, health management and policy, pensions, infrastructure, contracting, civics education and a host of other topics.
